Backdrop Fabrics

Woven fabrics are the standard across my backdrop range because they are tough, practical and easy to live with, especially on the road.

They fold down to less than pillowcase for easy transport and storage, making them ideal for touring. When you are bumping in, bumping out or packing for the next show, that kind of convenience makes life a whole lot easier.

They also hang nicely and look great once in place, giving your artwork a clean, professional finish. Under lights they really come into their own, helping you stand out and look more polished too.

My fabrics are tough, enough for ongoing use & well suited to both indoor & outdoor applications. They are made to handle the job without becoming hard work.

They are easy to maintain, which makes them a solid long-term choice. My two main woven fabric options are Supa-Tuff and Blockout.

Supa-Tuff - Strong, Easy - Value & Versatile

Supa-Tuff is the toughest fabric in my range. It looks great under lights, gives you rich blacks, and works beautifully with full-colour graphics and photos. It is also tough enough for outdoor signs, so it is built to last.

Blockout - Luxurious, Durable & 100% Opaque

Blockout is 100% opaque, so it is ideal for outdoor use or stages with lights behind you. Its tight weave stops light bleed, while still giving you a tough, great looking fabric that suits full-colour backdrops beautifully.

Steve About Your Artwork

Good artwork makes a big difference on a backdrop. And what looks great on a phone screen, may not translate into great artwork for your backdrop (size matters 😞).

The gold standard is an image type called a Vector. These are best because they scale up cleanly to any size without losing quality.

Large high-resolution "raster images" (photo-style images made from pixels) can also work well.

As a guide, raster images should be around 100–150 DPI (dots per inch) at full size.

Print colours ideally will be in a format called CMYK, though this is not a deal breaker.

If you are not sure about your artwork, don't stress, I can take all the guess work out of this for you

Send me your ideas, images or even hand drawn art, I am on your side after all 😊
